

Reporting and recording SEND bullying

Acknowledgements

This resource is reproduced with the kind permission of East Sussex County Council Anti-Bullying Team, from their Practitioners' Toolkit: Responding to bullying of children & young people with special educational needs and disabilities.

SEND-specific issues

The ability to report and record incidents of bullying behaviour is a crucial part of any anti-bullying strategy. Schools and other settings need to encourage and make it as easy as possible for children and young people to report bullying incidents.

Having a 'one size fits all' approach is unhelpful when supporting children and young people with a range of SEN and disabilities who experience bullying behaviour.

Therefore having a range of reporting and recording mechanisms is important. In all cases of bullying behaviour it is necessary to act quickly, but even more so for children with learning disabilities who may have difficulty in communicating what happened.

“[After I had talked about the bullying and nothing happened] I started to get really angry. They [teachers] hadn't listened. Made me feel I couldn't talk to anyone. I started to get really angry and taking it out on my [family] at home, because no one had listened to me.”

Quote from Council for Disabled Children 2013

Keeping records of bullying incidents will enable you to:

- Manage individual cases effectively.
- Monitor and evaluate the effectiveness of strategies.
- Demonstrate defensible decision making in the event of complaints being made.

The aims of this resource are to:

- Help staff gain a better understanding of the bullying behaviour before talking to those involved
- To establish what led up to the incident as this may be useful in exposing deeper causes of the conflict which can be followed up later.
- To find out what happened during the incident and everyone's role in it
- To enable each individual to think about their role in the incident, and begin the process of reflection so that the young person/people who have exhibited the bullying behaviours realise the impact of their behaviour

RESOLUTION AND MOVING ON IS COVERED IN OTHER RESOURCES

Creating a “telling” environment

When creating a telling environment many young people, not just those with SEND, are often too scared to report bullying, may have received threats from perpetrators about reporting bullying behaviour or see reporting bullying behaviour as ‘grassing’.

An additional factor for young people with SEND will be that some may not fully recognise bullying behaviour because of features of their learning needs.

Young people often state that they are not believed when they do tell. Creating an anti-bullying ethos where it’s okay to tell is a crucial first step together with having a number of reporting mechanisms in place.

In order to ensure children and young people with SEND feel confident about reporting bullying behaviour you should consider the following:

- A quiet place to communicate and report the bullying
- Understand the child’s communication needs
- Can the young person understand you?
- Are their communication tools available to them?
- Have they had time to calm down and fully tell what they want to?
- Allow plenty of time
- Do they need a supporter?

Young people with a range of needs including learning disability, sensory impairment and emotional behavioural difficulties will require specific communication and staff will need to check their understanding.

Many children with autism for example are assumed to understand much more than they do.

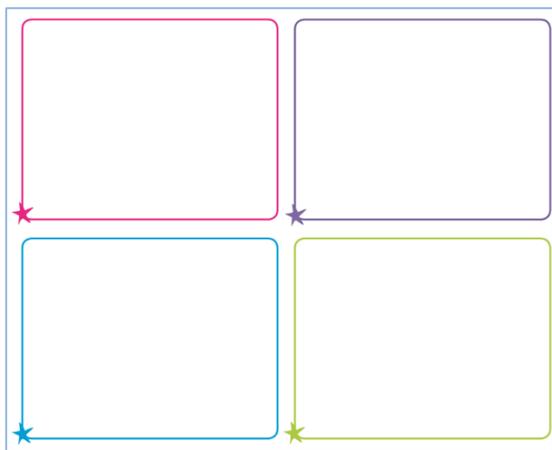

Resources- What is Bullying?

You may find it helpful to use the 'What bullying is.....' resource to discuss with the young people alongside the 'reporting form'. The resource outlines what bullying is and what it is not.

Resources- Finding out what happened?

The blank story board and the script can be used to enable children and young people to record and report an incident of bullying behaviour. Ask the child or young person to use the first two boxes to show what happened before the incident and the last two boxes to show what happened at the time of the bullying incidents.

Next steps

What happens next very much depends on your school's behaviour and anti-bullying policies, and the severity/impact of the bullying incident.

The most important aspect is to act quickly. Some children with SEND will find it hard to recount what has happened.

The incident may leave them distressed and upset for long after they can tell you why they are distressed and upset.

Parents of learners with SEND appreciate that there are a range of responses to an incident of bullying. But again, open and rapid communication with all parties is not only a source of comfort- it can also prevent re-occurrence.

Help us improve this resource

If you have ideas or suggestions that would improve this resource, such as alternative statements, or adaptations to make activities more affective with younger/older learners, or in the context of specific learning difficulties, we would really welcome your suggestions and comments:

Please contact antibullying@afa3as.org.uk

ABA Information Hub: www.anti-bullyingalliance.org.uk/1198

Achievement for All

 contact a family
for families with disabled children

 mencap
The voice of learning disability

Funded by

Department for Education

SEN and disabilities: developing effective anti-bullying practice: A programme of work, led by the Anti-Bullying Alliance and funded by the Department for Education, to reduce the incidence and impact of bullying of children and young people with SEN and/or disabilities in schools.

 -   Bullying is when someone =      means to hurt or upset   you on purpose	 -   Bullying is NOT when    + its an accident and    they say sorry
 -  Bullying is when    it keeps on happening	 -    Bullying is NOT when it     only happens once -no matter how bad it is
 -   Bullying is when you     cannot get the hurt   to stop	 -  Bullying is NOT    when someone stops +   and says sorry

What happened?

WHAT HAPPENED?

Exactly where and when did the bullying take place?

Draw a picture if it helps (if outdoors, there may be CCTV or similar to refer to)

Were there any other young people around at the time?

(If the young person can draw or describe where bystanders were, this will be useful information to support further investigation)

Was there an adult around at the time?

(If the young person can draw or describe where the adult was standing, this will also be useful information to support further investigation... especially in the case where the adult present (say, a lunchtime, supervisor for example) may not have considered the behaviours observed as "bullying", and failed to report it)

Do you know the names of the people who bullied you?

(Some schools have pictures of all learners readily to hand in order to help children identify others. If identification is still a problem, ask them to describe the individuals as best as possible)

What were you doing before the incident took place?

(This is important. It may be that the young person was doing nothing provocative. However, in some cases, such as learners with autism or ADHD, their own behaviours may be been misconstrued and triggered)

Can you remember exactly what happened or what was said?

What happened next?

Has this happened before?

What would you like to happen now?

This is an important question. The views of the young person who is being bullied must be taken seriously. Remember, always take the perceptions and feelings of the young person being bullied as the starting point.